When this fd is not present in the struct fd_set it will return a negative value. Then I need to check if that fd is in the fd_set. However, after it returns a negative number, I need to read the remaining bytes of the fd. So the question is how can I first check the return of the fd in the fd_set, and then read the remaining bytes from the fd, so the rest of the code would not be affected? Thanks A: You have the pointer to the FD already, so you can safely cast it to a type whose size is exactly that of the struct member you're interested in. That is, if the fd is negative, then so will the pointer. Then call read() on the pointer. If it's negative, then read() will return 0, and you can check the remaining bytes you want f988f36e3a
